Ward, George.

An attestation to divine truth. In which are pointed out the universal love of the Deity; the display of His wisdom; the most certain truth and high importance of the ground of the mystery of nature and grace opened in the Teutonic theosophy; the causes of the great corruption in the world; and the design and completion of our existence. The whole conducing to show the most horrid nature and pernicious effects of all evil, and to inculcate our true good and universal felicity, the great and most important concern of every individual of the human species ... ... 1775. (Card 2)

At head of title: As the great business of the polite world is the eager pursuit of amusement, and as the Public diversions of the season have been interrupted by the hostile parade in the capital, the exhibition of a new farce may not be unenterprising.

These lines also appear on the t.p. after the title: The author has thought proper to borrow the following spirited lines from a late celebrated poet, and offer to the public by way of Prologue, which cannot fail of pleasing at this crisis:

What! arm'd for virtue, and not point the pen.
Brand the bold front of shameless guilty men. (12 lines)

Warsaw. Uniwersytet.

Founded by the Russian government in 1816 as a Polish institution, opened September 1817; suppressed 1831; reestablished 1862 as a higher school (Szkola glowna warszawska) which existed until it was reorganized, October, 1869, as a Russian university (Imperatorskii varshavskii universitet). In 1915, as a result of territorial changes, the personnel and equipment of this Russian university were removed to Rostoff-on-the-Don, while a new Polish university was established upon the old foundation at Warsaw (Uniwersytet warszawski).

In the Library of Congress catalogue, publications of the Polish university are entered under the Polish form of name:
